

CONVERSATIONS WITH MAPS

These three lectures were given by Sarah Tyacke on 5, 6 and 8 March 2007 as the Sandars lectures for that year at Cambridge University Library. The texts are as read at the time, but include some later revisions and citations to works used within the text. The slides shown are listed below.

Acknowledgements

First I should like to thank the Electors of the Sandars Readership in Bibliography for inviting me to give these lectures and also thank Peter Fox the librarian of Cambridge University Library and his colleagues for their help in the preparation of them.

I should again like to thank Matthew Edney for his help on lecture I and elsewhere, and my former colleagues in the British Library Peter Barber and Tony Campbell, as well as Roger Kain and Catherine Delano Smith, for pointing me in the right direction or giving advice. Others who were kind enough to help were Tony Hogarth-Smith at Christ's Hospital, Monique Pelletier, Richard Luckett and colleagues at the Pepys Library, Magdalene College, Cambridge, colleagues at the Beineke Library, Yale University, colleagues at the Memorial University, St John's New Foundland and at the Bibliotheca Nazionale in Florence. Others to whom I am grateful are Anthony Milton, Matthew Sheldon, Royal Naval Museum, Portsmouth and Anne Taylor, Map Librarian at CUL. Nicholas Tyacke ensured I arrived on time to deliver my lectures and was a great support while I prepared them.
