NOTE

THE CHARACTERISTICS OF ROSARIES

KUNGA YONTEN HOCHOTSANG

Various kinds of rosaries are freely used in Tibet by the Lama and laity alike, in ritualistic performances and while saying mantras and prayers. As Buddhism has strongly influenced the ways of Tibetan life, the rosary is adopted as an ornamental article, if we put it in a very loose way.

These, unlike rosaries of other Buddhist countries, drew great attention of the Westerners. An explorer in the sphere of Tibetan Buddhism has written an account of the Tibetan rosaries including mode of telling the beads. But even this lengthy account does not elucidate the truth and his interpretation has strayed away from the point at issue by description of each different type of rosaries are meant for the different gods and deities and even of the Buddhist Sects in Tibet. A peculiar reason was given why a rosary has one hundred and eight beads. The Explorer says, “The rosary contains 108 beads of uniform size. The reason for this special number is alleged to be merely a provision to ensure the repetition of the sacred spell a full hundred times, and the extra beads are added to make up for any omission of beads through absent-mindedness during the telling process or for actual loss of beads by breakage.” and adds “This number (108) is perhaps borrowed, like so many other Lamaist fashions, from the Hindus, of whom Vaishnavs possess a rosary with 108 beads.” But such information is not available in canonical and non-canonical Buddhist teachings and in Tibetan literature.

The reason for extra eight beads is neither to cover up any omission during telling process of hundred times, not does it corresponds to the rosary of any Hindu deity, whose number of beads might be one hundred and eight. On the contrary the one hundred and eight beads of rosary is essential for the service of ‘rGyas-pa’ and is applicable to all the gods and deities irrespectively, in Buddhist Tantric practices.

Similarly, the substance and number of beads of a rosary entirely depends on the ritual-services, but not of the gods or deities to whom worship or service is conducted or of the worshipper. Each god or deity is having four different ritual-services which determines the substance and number of beads. The four services are:

(I) Shi-wa (Zhi-ba, शान्ति)
(II) Gyas-pa (rGyas-pa, पूर्णि)
(III) Wang (dBang, वर्ष)
(IV) Ngon-chod (mNgon-spyod, अष्टिर (ऋ)

I. In the service of ‘Zhi-ba’, a rosary of crystal (केर) or Oyster Shell (कोष) or pearl (केर) and other white substances are needed and its number of beads is only one hundred and one.

II. In the service of ‘rGyas-pa’, a rosary of gold (क्षेत्र) or Silver (क्षेत्र) or copper (क्षेत्र) or lotus-seed (क्षेत्र) is used and one hundred and eight beads are suggested for this service.

III. In the service of ‘dBang’, the number of beads is usually fifty and for special purpose, a twenty-five-bead rosary is also recommended and the beads of this rosary are made of saffron and any other like fragrant substances.

IV. In the service of ‘mNgon-spyod’, Raksha or Rudraksha (क्षेत्र) or Lungtang (क्षेत्र) or human bone (क्षेत्र) rosary is used and the number of beads in it is sixty only.

The extract below is given from Kanjur (bKa’-Gyur) not from Lamaic Scripture. 1

Bo-dhi-tse rosary can be used for any kind of ritual-services and mantras. It is said that "Bo-dhi-tse does all the service and function more effectively than the other substances. A similar description of rosaries is available in Sakya Kabum (Sakya bKa'-bum), Druk Kunchen Kabum ('Brug-kun-mkhyen-bka, bum) and in other texts.

The String

The material and composition of the string is another important factor, normally a string or thread of wool (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) or cotton (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) or gold (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) is used for tranquillity and prosperity. A string of crow’s feather (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) or hair of ass (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) or camel (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) or dog (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) or human hair (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) found in the cemetery is supposed to drive out and subdue the evil and the enimes etc. The twisted-string consists of three or nine strands and the inner significance of the string is explained below.

The manner of holding the rosary would be different in a different ritual-service.

I. For 'Zhi-ba' service, the rosary is held near the heart (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) and the beads are passed between the index finger (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) and the thumb (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ).

II. For 'rGyas-pa' service, the rosary is held near the navel (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) and the beads are passed between the middle finger (\
\texttt{\textbackslash l_t\textbackslash t} ) and the thumb.
III. For ‘dBang’ service, the rosary is held near the genital organ (སོན་གྲིམ་པ) and the beads are passed between the ring finger (ཉིད་བགྲྭ) and the thumb.

IV. For ‘mNgon-spyod’ or ‘Drag-po’ service, the rosary is held near the knee (ཤུན་མེ) while sitting posture is cross-legged (ཤུག་པ) and the beads are passed between the little finger (ཤིརི) and the thumb.

Symbolic Meaning

The beads of a rosary represents the Dachampa (དགྲ་བོམ་པ་, བོད་). The first part of Dozin (དོ་བོྦིན, the union holder), the roundish shape represents the Dharmakaya (ཤིང་མ་) and second part which is in the form of a stupa (མཆོད་རྩེན) symbolises the Dharmadhatus (ཤིང་མ་ཅིན). Three-twisted-string represents the Trikayas (ཤྱིས་པ), that is, Dharmakaya (ཤིང་མ་), Sambhogakaya (ཤིང་མ་བོད་པར་ཐོབ་) and Nirmanakaya (ཤྱིང་མ་). The nine-twisted-string represents the Vajradhara (ཤྱིང་མ་) and eight Bodhisattvas, namely, Jampal Shonuru Gyurpa (ཤྱིས་ཀྱིས་མཁྲུལ་བུ་, མཁྲུལ་མཁྲུལ་ཆུང་མུན), Chakna-Dorje (ཤྱིས་ཀྱིས་, དཔལ་ཁྲུལ), Chen-res-zig (ཤྱིས་རེ་ཞིག, ཡོལ་བིན་པར་རྩེད), Sayningpo (ཤྱིས་དོན་, བོད་གནད་པའི་) Dibpathumchednaspalwa (ཤྱིས་དོན་མཁྲུལ་བུ་ཐོབ་པར་ཐོབ་པ་, རང་བོད་ཕྲོད་མི་), Namkheyi Nyingpo (ཤྱིས་དོན་མཁྲུལ་, རྩ་མི་ནམ་) Jampa (ཤྱིས་པ་, མེལ་ལག) and Kundu Zangpo (ཤྱིས་དོན་, རྩ་ནམ་པོ་).

As a believer in Tantra, I have given here only a general introduction, with a view to provide more authentic information to the readers. For detailed, information one should study the “rGyud” (Tantra) and its commentaries therein. Austin Waddell’s treatise on this subject suffers from shortcomings which I have modestly attempted to reveal.
