APPENDIX 2

CHILDREN'S BURIALS AT DEIR EL-MEDINA

This Appendix collates all burials of children known from Deir el-Medina. Given the differing levels of preservation between the Eastern and Western necropolises, and also the difference in burial nature as outlined in Chapter 6, there is more data available for the Eastern necropolis. This Appendix therefore focusses more heavily on that data-set. However, for the Eastern necropolis, as Chapter 6 discusses, Bruyère's interpretation of the internments is problematic; his identification of burials as either of children or adults cannot be relied upon. As such, and as less than 30 burials were recorded overall, all Eastern necropolis burials are collated here; the distinction between those of children and adults is discussed in Chapter 6 itself. For the Western necropolis, where most burials consisted of family tombs, only those which contained definite evidence of children have been included.

2. EASTERN NECROPOLIS BURIALS: GRAVE GOODS

In the absence of access to the physical mortuary corpora for re-analysis, identification of pottery types uses the terminology of Bruyère (1937b: 147-202). In certain cases, especially for nuts and fruit, the exact number of items has not been given; in such instances, the minimum certain number is provided (e.g. 12 +). With small vases containing oil or other liquids, it is difficult to determine whether this was for consumption or ritual purposes; they have therefore been counted in the tally of vases generally, as have their contents under 'containers of fats, oil, resin'.

3. WESTERN NECROPOLIS BURIALS: MANNER, DIMENSIONS AND BRUYÈRE'S INTERPRETATION

Because of the different nature of evidence from the Western necropolis—most reliable evidence comes from Dynasty 19 or later, when burials had transitioned into family tombs rather than individual graves—and the frequently pillaged condition of such burials, a full register cannot be created as for the Eastern necropolis. As such, the following table collates all graves where evidence of children was found, alongside any grave goods if present.

Based on Bruyère's reports, it is unclear whether the final entry in this table—an apparent pair of child's sandals—come from TT359 or TT360. This entry has therefore not been included in the accompanying tally of grave goods. For the same reason, neither has the entry listed here under 1322-1325.
