Managing research data costs too much money and involves too much red tape.

Good research data management means ensuring that data is handled ethically and stored securely.

The university’s reputation could be damaged by a significant loss or breach of sensitive data.