Contents:

On two paper flyleaves are notes by J.M. Kemble on the contents
A vellum flyleaf of Parkers date is headed Homiliarium saxonicanum. The word liber with a number probably followed but has been erased: compare his entries in the Corpus Christi volume of Homilies
A list of the contents follows
Skeat Ælfric's lives of SS EETS, gives some account of this MS in II.xvii

The hands range from very large bold ones e.g. quire 6 f.37 to delicate ones e.g. quire 8 f.53. The number of scribes available shows that the book was written at a very important centre. The English saints in it are Etheldreda (who comes very near the beginning) Alban Edmund Oswald. East Anglia is suggested to me.
